MERRITT PEOPLE ARE EASY MARKS

Victimized by Foreigner Who Posed as Man of Wealth—Police Now
Searching for Bogus Millionaire.

Merritt, B.C. July.—Alex. Frederick, a foreigner, speaking pigeon English and supposed to be a Russian, is on the rampage with an idea back of his head that he is a millionaire. He blew into Merritt a few days ago, and for one day worked at the coal mine. Taking rooms at the City Hotel, he started out to buy the town. First of all he told the wondering public that he had $75,000 and that he was negotiating the sale of a farm near Lethbridge for $15,000. A few days later Alex. purchased $5,000 worth of stock in the Calcutta-Caribbean Company, which is just starting operations here, giving a cheque for $1,000 as a first payment. The cheque was drawn on the Bank of Toronto. Lethbridge, and Alex. received his receipt for payment of $1,000. A few hours later he negotiated the purchase of the City Hotel and spent hours in a lawyer's office closing the deal.

As the new proprietor of the City Hotel, Alex. started on a borrowing campaign and successfully raised a considerable amount of money. He had with him a little boy of six years, who, he said, was his son. Talking the boy into several of the stores, he put him out with new clothes, and bought some for himself. He successfully borrowed money from hotel-keepers and merchants, including a Jew, and ran up a board bill of $80. In the meantime the victims were beginning to question the sagacity of their deals, and the wires were made hot between Merritt and Lethbridge. The result was that the $1,000 cheque was said to be no good. A wire was sent through to the chief of police at Lethbridge, and back came the reply, "Fredericks owns nothing here. Did some thing here and skipped. Expense prevents issuing warrant."

(Signed) Gillespie, Chief of Police.

But just before that wire arrived it was found that Alex. and his little boy were nowhere to be seen. In the still quiet hours of darkness they had found a way of escaping. Among other important deals which the erstwhile millionaire commenced during his short stay in Merritt was the purchase of a $5,000 automobile and the buying of a race horse.

The police are now on his trail. He is of medium build, dark, wore white pants and white silk shirt, always wearing black cuff protectors on his shirt. Spotted a short black moustache.

SELF-RESPECT

Nehemiah 6:11. Should such a man as I see?

He that respects himself is safe from others.

The Book of Nehemiah is as fine a piece of autobiography as one could wish to read. It introduces us to one, and his kind is none too numerous, who can be depended upon. In every circumstance to play the man he is moved neither by fear nor favor. He has the faculty of seeing and feeling the right with unerring directness. And once having seen the right, no human power can turn him aside. If we ask the secret of Nehemiah's manliness, it is revealed to us in the words from which our text is taken. Nehemiah's enemies have exhausted every means fair or foul to thwart the great work to which he had set his hand and now, working through Shemai, they seek to inveigle him into a compromising step. Out of pretending fear Nehemiah had taken refuge in the temple precincts and sought to induce Nehemiah to follow his example. To this cowardly cowardice Nehemiah's swift, decisive answer is: "Should such a man as I see, and who is there that being as I am would go into the sanctuary to save his life, or his position, or his reputation? I will not go in." Self-respect has a true guiding instinct in moments of perplexity and peril. Give heed to it.

Self-respect has a social value. No man long respects himself who thinks meanly of his fellow men. "One man cannot hold another down in the ditch without remaining in the ditch with him," says Booker T. Washington. Neither can a man think highly of his fellow unless he has a high appreciation of his own inherent worth. The only measure we possess of other men's worth is just ourselves. To despise oneself is to end ultimately in despising others. The only gift we have to give to men and to God is just ourselves. Self-respect conserves and develops the worth of our manhood and makes our gift worth while. As a self-respecting Jew, Nehemiah could not content himself while his fellow citizens were in wretchedness. No self-respect led him forth as a patriot and reformer. Because he believed in himself he believed in his fellow countrymen and became their deliverer.

Self-respect is the secret of personal satisfaction. Men can bear no heavier burden than the burden of self-scorn.

"Less is not shame nor to be less than fee.

But to be less than thyself."

We can bear the burden of other's sin, but we cannot bear our own. Phillips Brooks once said with great solemnity to a friend, "How wretched should I be, if I felt I was carrying about with me any secret I should not be willing all the world should know. During a political campaign one of President Garfield's lieutenants suggested an exceedingly questionable policy. To Garfield's objection he replied, "No one will know it." "But I shall know it," was the quick reply. If we would live lives of inner peace we must keep the heart pure. The mischief of sin is that it degrades us and robs us of self-respect and makes us slaves. "Everyone that commits sin is the bond servant of sin," and the bitterness of our bondage is that we forge our own chains.

Man was made for righteousness. "He lives for that he can stand erect before his fellows, and God himself says, 'Son of man, stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee.' Keeping our self-respect is just being true to our better self. It is so ordering our lives that, when all is known about us, we can still look our fellows in the face, and we can still look up unto God and know that we have been true to that better self that lives within us all."

Archibald: "Halo, Jimmy, what's the matter? Fallen off your bicycle?" Jimm: "No! I was trying to reach a top shelf by standing on some dictionary, and they gave way." Archibald: "I see—words fell off you!"

BENEFICIAL EFFECTS OF SCHOOL FAIRS

School fairs are to the boys and girls of the land what the larger fairs are to adults. By this time they should be thoroughly organized, prize lists published and circulated and programmes of proceedings prepared. Of course boys' and girls' clubs are the principal feeders of the fairs, but entries are usually accepted from children who are not members of any such organization. Agricultural representatives all testify to the splendid effect the fairs are having upon farm life and agricultural pursuits generally. One, for instance, writes "I do not know of any one thing which is a greater factor in improving the farm production and the farm industry of the country than the school fairs. In addition to bringing direct, practical results, school fairs have had a very effective influence in encouraging teachers to take up the teaching of agriculture in the public schools." Another says: "The importance of the school fair cannot be overemphasized. It teaches our future farmers how they can take the most out of the soil. It makes our rural people better and happier." In recognition of the truth of the old adage "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," a programme of sports is usually included in the day's list of proceedings.

PULLS DOWN U.S. FLAG

A flag incident which threatens to call for an explanation from Washington occurred in Hamilton over last week-end, when a young man, who is said to be of a prominent local family, made an effort to tear the Stars and Stripes from the flagpole in front of the office of the American Consul. The youth, it was stated, jumped up from the pavement and succeeded in clutching one corner of the flag, which he pulled on, with the result that the flag was torn. The young man, Jose de Oliveira, American Consul, is said to have lodged complaints with civic officials, and also his government at Washington. Mayor Copley, it was learned, has expressed the deepest regret over the matter, and has written a letter to Mr. de Oliveira, deploring the fact that any resident of the city would be so disrespectful as to insult the flag of the United States.

BIG CROWDS ATTEND ANNUAL REGATTA AT SYLVAN LAKE

Sports, Baseball, Dancing and Picnicking Are Attractive.

The Sylvan Lake Regatta has come to be one of the big sporting events of the season. Despite some uncertainty regarding the arrangements till within a few days of the event, big crowds were on hand to enjoy the program. The people came from all directions; campers, villagers, and residents of Red Deer and other towns were there, as well as large numbers from the farming communities.

The sports on land and water were attractive and in some events brought out fair competition. The baseball tournament was a disappointment to Red Deer. Eckville got the bye, and Red Deer was drawn against Innisfail. At one stage of the proceedings, Red Deer appeared to have the game tacked away safely, the score being 9 to 3; but Peterson lost his control. On previous occasions, he has succeeded in regaining himself, but this time he failed to come back, and the manager pulled him. But it was too late. Innisfail tied the score in the fifth and added another in the sixth.

The big dancing floor was the chief centre of attraction in the evening, with the Plaza Jazz orchestra on the job.

Taken altogether, it was a great day for Sylvan Lake.

The tug-of-war resulted in a comparatively easy victory for Sylvan Lake. There was only one pull each, which the losers thought did not properly display their powers, but it is doubtful whether it would have made any difference in the result as "Oscar Weaslin's Swedes," as they were facetiously called, have some reputation.

The Red Deer team appeared to have weight with Fred Lund and Jack Teasdale on the end, but they had not the muscle, apparently. In the first pull Rainey Creek beat Red Deer, and Sylvan Lake beat Penhold. The final went to Sylvan Lake, which had the following team: John Smith, Axel Johansen, J. Johansen, Hans Olsen, Harry Nelson, and Halvarson, anchor; H. W. Wilson, captain.

The Baseball

The ball games were for a prize of $100 with Innisfail, Eckville and Red Deer represented, with a good bunch of rooters for each. Eckville drew the bye, leaving Red Deer and Innisfail to face each other. Innisfail was reserving Sarlund for the League games, or for the second game, if they happened to win, and the veteran, Mr. Wagner, and Willard, took up the pitching and pulled through a victory, owing to Peterson going wild in the Red Deer box and allowing the Innisfail team to overcome the big handicap against them. When Innisfail had done that, there was no stopping them from a victory. The umpiring of Morrow, of Sylvan Lake, might have been keener, but one side suffered as much as the other, probably.

The first two innings went cannily, a pretty double play, Wagner to Denby at second to Sarlund at first, cutting off Red Deer in the first and Willard in Innisfail's second innings, getting nipped at third base after a nice hit to the outfield. In the third innings the fireworks commenced, a couple of errors each on pick-ups by Innisfail's short and third, another slip by second, a hit-by-pitcher and Nelson's two bagger combining to bring in six runs. Downey was run down between second and third, but Fitzgerald managed to race home during the proceedings. Innisfail came back with three runs, two bases on balls, two hits by pitcher, a hit by Sarlund, and an error at third doing the business. Red Deer put up three more in its fourth, a two-bagger by Peterson, an error at third, a passed ball, and successive hits by Nelson, Fitzgerald and Downey accounting for the total. Willard relieved Wagner in the pitcher's box here, and held the Red Deer men without a score thereafter, only three or four men going to bat in each innings. Innisfail got one more in the fourth, four bases on balls and a couple of wild pitches being the cause. Had Peterson been yanked here, the game would probably have been saved, but three more bases on balls, a wild pitch, an error of pitcher, and a couple of hits sent in five runs for Innisfail and tied the score. Downey then took a turn for Red Deer in the pitcher's box, without much success, and the Wagner relieved, and held Innisfail scoreless in the sixth and seventh, but in the eighth a hit by Wagner and a two-bagger by Sarlund scored the winning run. Red Deer was out in the ninth by a double play. Sarlund fielding Fitzgerald's grounder to Thompson at third to catch Nelson and the ball was relayed to first to get the runner, the umpire declaring him out, though the decision was open to serious question. So Innisfail took the candy with thirteen errors!

The second game, was of an entirely different kind, the play being snappy and clean. Innisfail winning by 3 to 1. Sarlund and Willard, their best battery, were in the points for Innisfail, and they got splendid support, Walker and Greider, the Eckville battery, also played a fine game, and there was nothing to be said but the batteries in this season. The Innisfail team seemed to have the grip on the game all through, getting off to a good start in the first innings. Thompson got that on an error at that bag, and was advanced to second on Wagner's safe hit to left. Sarlund laid down a'ave to catcher, who put Thompson at third. Willard's long two-bagger over centrefield's head, however, brought in Wagner and Sarlund, Wagner's hit in the third, with one down, looked good, especially after Sarlund following him to first on too wide throw of Walker's, which Parry managed to stop, nevertheless. Walker got Wagner at third, however, on Willard's grounder, and DeLong went out on a grounder to first, leaving Sarlund on second. A nice hit by Thompson and a fielding error of Walker's put two men on bases for Innisfail in the fifth, with none down, but the big three—Wagner, Sarlund and Willard—were all retired in order. Two men got on bases again for Innisfail in the sixth through errors by right and second.

The usual meeting of the Condor U. F. A. Local was held on Saturday, called to order by the President at 9 p.m., with twenty-eight present.

The President called on Mr. R. Patterson for a report of the Political convention in Red Deer. Mr. Patterson reported that H. Meeres and E. Crumney were there to represent our Local as well as himself. Mr. Patterson spoke very favorably of G. W. Smith, the U.F.A. candidate, and told us that the U.F.A. stood for the abolition of the patronage system. Mr. Meeres said a few words about the convention, and asked all members to study the U.F.A. platform. Mr. Crumney gave a short speech also, and said every member should keep G. W. Smith in mind; they would make no mistake in voting for him. Mr. Meeres suggested the nomination of a committee to canvass the district for the coming election. Moved by N. Eastman and R. Patterson that Mr. Meeres nominate such a committee. Carried.

There was a good deal of discussion about the picnic on July 14.

Moved by R. Patterson and H. Meeres that we send a letter of condolence to Mrs. A. Galtzky in her recent sad bereavement. Carried.

JAPANESE HOUSE INSCRIPTIONS

In Japan you can learn a good many things about the resident of a house merely by looking at his door. According to police regulations, says a writer by Chambers' Journal, the entrance to every residence must have a small wooden tablet affixed to it. This tablet has the name and the number of the house on it and on another tablet is the name of the responsible household, who in many cases is an infant, a younger brother or a relative.

Sometimes, though rarely, the names of other inmates are placed over his door, but there are no police regulations that require it, except in the case of boarding houses, which have to place their boarders' names outside for all to see. A person fortunate enough to possess a telephone always has the number proudly displayed over his entrance. Near it you will often see a quaint enameled or tin disk. That is the fire-insurance mark. Every fire-insurance company has its own special metal plate, which it nails to the lintel when it insures a house.

There are always several small pieces of paper pasted over the door, placed there by the police. One is to certify that the periodical osol, or great cleaning, has taken place. Another paper tells us, perhaps, the sanitary conditions are satisfactory. What others stand for is known only to the police themselves.

Formerly it was the rule that, if there was a well upon the premises, the fact had to be proclaimed by a square board marked with the character for well—ido. This was to show where people could obtain water in case of fire in the neighborhood. The regulation may still be in force in country places, but, owing to water now being laid in pipes, it is no longer enforced in the cities.

Damage reported in Dakota and Minnesota from rust; oats not turning out as well as expected in the United States. Cutting will start in Alberta last of month.

VALLEY CENTRE NEWS

Mr. W. E. Janssen has just returned from visiting her people in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Chris. Reay left on Monday last for Rochester to be operated on for cancer. We wish him a speedy and successful return.

The candidates for the provincial election realized the importance of Valley Centre, inasmuch as both addressed meetings here during the last week. They were well attended.

Mr. F. Moore returned from Olds last Tuesday.

MORE RED BLOOD; LESS RED FLAG

G. W. V. A. Leaders Are Strong for Constitutional Government.

W. J. Botterill returned last week from the conference of G.W.V.A. leaders in Port Arthur. As President of the Alberta Command, Mr. Botterill represented one of, if not the largest, paid-up memberships of any province in the Dominion.

Plans were forwarded for the National convention in the latter part of September or early October. The actual date will depend on arrangements with the noted personages who are expected to attend. Among those who may be present are Lord Byng, Field Marshal Haig and Foch, Admiral Beatty and General Pershing. A leading feature of the convention will be the National Military Pageant.

Mr. Botterill was impressed with the calibre of the men who are now guiding the destinies of the G.W.V.A., leading men in their communities, who stand for sound, sane government. Their aim is to contribute to national stability. In Mr. Botterill's own address he emphasized the need of more red blood and less of the red flag.

Mr. Botterill paid a brief visit to his home at Fleming, Saskatchewan, where they have the best crop in their history. On the whole, crop conditions throughout the west are fairly good.

ABUSE OF STATUS HOSPITAL SHIP IS NOT PROVEN

Leipzig, Germany, July 14.—At the continuation yesterday of the trial in the supreme court here of the two German submarine lieutenants, Ludw. Dittmar and Johann Boldt, charged with murder in the first degree for bringing on lifeboats after the Canadian hospital ship Llandovery Castle had been torpedoed in the summer of 1918, Petty Officer Popitz, of the submarine which sank the ship, said that the Germans always suspected hospital ships, which they considered a danger to submarines.

Popitz declared he and Lieut. Dittmar tried to persuade Commander Pathitz of the submarine, not to attack the hospital ship, but the submarine fired two torpedoes and then came to the surface. The witness testified he saw three or four lifeboats out and several men swimming; then the crew of the submarine was ordered below deck.

The general feeling prevailed that something unfortunate had occurred. Popitz declared. Later he heard firing and assumed the lifeboats were being fired on. A naval expert representing the German war office, admitted there was no proof of any abuse of a hospital ship's status on the part of the Llandovery Castle.

The Llandovery Castle was bound from Halifax to an English port, when she was torpedoed on the night of January 27, 1918, off Fastnet. Out of 238 persons on board, only 24 were saved.

Largest Canadian Atlantic Ship

THE EMPRESS OF SCOTLAND.

The largest liner ever assigned to the St. Lawrence route is soon to make her initial appearance at Quebec according to announcements made by the C. P. R. This steamer is their newly acquired liner the Empress of Scotland, formerly the German liner Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and she is expected to arrive at Quebec during the first week in August.

The C. P. R. purchased this liner from the British government last winter when it was seen that the company's own steamers, which are new but built in England, would not be ready this season on account of the delay arising from the big war in the ship yards there.

The new Empress of Scotland is 17,000 gross tons. The liner can do the Atlantic under the Canadian house flag from Liverpool to New York. She is a first, second and third class carrier with luxurious cabin equipment. The liner was built in 1905 and was especially designed for the New York service. The Empress of Scotland will make her first sailing from Quebec on August 11.

The new liner is the largest in the Canadian Atlantic service. Her dimensions are: Length, 700 feet; breadth, 77 feet, and draft of water, 34 feet.

DE VALERA AND LLOYD GEORGE IN CONFERENCE

At Conclusion of Meeting Official Says That it Terminated "Amicably."

London, July 14.—Eamonn De Valera and Premier Lloyd George conferred for more than two and a half hours today over the question of an Irish settlement. The Republican leader arrived at the prime minister's residence in Downing street at 4.30 p.m., and left at 7.10 p.m.

At the conclusion of the conference, Art O'Brien, president of the Gaelic league in London, stated that it had terminated "amicably."

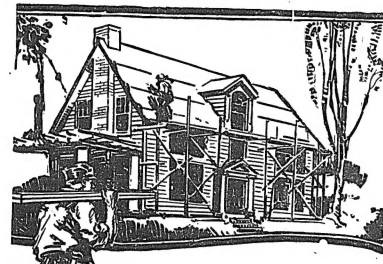

As had been agreed upon, a communique regarding the conference will be issued later.

The Republican leader's appearance at the prime minister's official residence was punctual to the minute, as it was exactly at the time appointed that he stepped through the door. Mr. Lloyd George was awaiting him and their conversations over the peace questions were begun immediately.

Despite a drizzling rain, a great crowd which had gathered at the entrance to Downing street waited patiently for some announcements from the momentous meeting. Shortly after Mr. De Valera entered the prime minister's home, the crowd knelt in Whitehall and began to recite the Rosary.

The Irish Republican leader drove directly from the hotel in Buckingham palace road used as headquarters by the Irish delegation to Downing street in a motor car. He was accompanied by Art O'Brien, president of the Gaelic league in London, and Robert C. Barton. A large crowd, mostly women, which had gathered about the hotel, swarmed around the automobile as it departed, cheering and waving Sinn Fein flags.

THE CATTLE INDUSTRY

Some Aspects of the Present Day Situation

(Western Market Gazette, Winnipeg) On May 27 President Harding's signature to the Emergency Export Bill, which had recently been passed by the American Senate. The signing of this bill immediately placed a duty of 30% on all cattle entering the U.S.A. The effect on the Canadian market was at once apparent, particularly in relation to stockers and feeders, and the price of these classes declined from $1 to $1.50. Best cattle also dropped in price, but not to as great extent but still sufficient to be a very serious matter to the shipper. For a few days following the passing of the bill, cattle trade was demoralized. In Canada, buyers practically ceased operations altogether, except in the case of butchers and packers buying their immediate requirements.

The market has now settled back to a steady but lower basis and already some stock cattle are finding their way to the States and paying the duty, but there is no doubt but that this is at the expense of the producer rather than the consumer.

An export outlet exists for a quantity of real heavy well finished export steers to go to Europe, but for the past few years these have not been the class of cattle that have been in demand and for that reason few are offering. Several trial shipments have gone from both Alberta and Saskatchewan with a destination at Glasgow, Liverpool and London, and some very satisfactory results have been secured from some of the earlier shipments.

The Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, from Ottawa, is in Britain at the present time and is putting up a strenuous fight to have the embargo against landing of live cattle removed.

The shipments spoken of earlier in this article have been very favorable spoken of and could a longer period between landing and slaughter be arranged for, their price would be further improved. This period at present is only ten days.

Cattlemen in Canada are faced now with a number of problems which will require a lot of study. New markets must be found and new methods of marketing must be devised. Only the best of steers must be used and feeding methods must be closely studied. All steers must be dehorned and all males intended for feeding purposes castrated when young. It may prove more economical for the grower to go back to the old practice of slaughtering his calves at birth or at least selling them for veal, the process which many pursued before the war. In the matter of dehorning already Toronto market has declared that starting June 1, 1932, all horned cattle will be discounted $3 per head. Shipments of stockers and feeders south when dehorned have often fetched from $5 to $11 per hundred more.

The local trade, particularly at Winnipeg, calls for a steer from 1,000 to 1,200 of one of the best breeds and well finished; steers of this quality will bring the top price and are always in demand. Last year at this date, Winnipeg packers paid $15 per cwt. for this class and in a few cases somewhat more. This year only a very few have been able to draw down over eight cents. This reduction has not been handed on to the consumer, at least not as far as the better class cuts are concerned. Last year steers of a 16-cent steer retailed at about 45 cents a pound. The same butchers buying 6-cent steers will charge from 35 to 40 cents for the same this year. One explanation of this is that all purchasers of meat desire the hind quarter cuts and the packers have great difficulty in disposing of the fore-quarters. Before the embargo went into force much of this meat was shipped to Chicago and other large centers. The severe drop in hides has also added to the burden of cost which must be borne by the higher class cuts. The grain-fed cattle in the West are practically all marketed for this year, and grass steers will soon be coming on the market. Prices will of necessity be lower on this class than on the dry fed because they will not dress out as well. Any farmer who is raising any quantity of livestock should visit one of the stock yards and familiarize himself with conditions as they exist. He should learn what the various classifications call for and what kind of stock in each class command the top price. He should follow the market from time to time and endeavor to withhold his cattle when too many are coming forward and by this means he would be in a position to obtain the best prices for the kind he had to offer. The old idea that by putting up a barbed wire fence around a piece of vacant land constitutes a pasture must be forgotten. Stock must have good water available at all times and adequate protection in the shape of trees or a shed. To furnish the cheaper trade, many fat cows and heifers and also steers that have not been finished are used. Some of the shops also use a large quantity of beef from cold storage that has been carried over from the fall.

SYLVAN LAKE

The ladies of Sylvan Lake met at the Sylvan Lake hall on Tuesday afternoon, July 12, to pay a farewell visit to Mrs. Harper, one of the much esteemed and hearty workers in this village, and who will be missed among the ladies in their effort to raise money for the church building fund. A nice tea was served by Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Horton and Mrs. Jamieson. The Plaza band played some good selections. Mrs. Harper was presented with an aluminum rooster as a small parting gift in remembrance of the happy times spent together. Mr. and Mrs. Harper will be leaving here to make their home in Delta this week.

SOLDIERS' MEMORIAL

H. J. Snell, Secretary of the Memorial Committee, is in receipt of a letter from Cecil S. Burgess, resident architect of Alberta University, who is, very kindly supervising the erection of the Memorial. Mr. Burgess reports that the sculptor, Mr. Norbury, is working continuously at his studio on the full size clay model of the statue. The method of work is very interesting, and Mr. Norbury would be glad to have a visit from any Red Deer contributors who happen to be in Edmonton at the time. The studio is in a small shed at the rear of No. 9931, 106th St., Edmonton.

Funds are still coming in to the Secretary. It is requested that all those who have subscribed will send in their cheques as soon as possible, for the work will soon be under way.

C.G.I.T. GIRLS' CAMP AT SYLVAN LAKE

Sixty-four girls went through Red Deer Wednesday morning for Sylvan Lake, where they will attend the annual camp of the Canadian Girls in Training, to be held there from July 13 to 25. Thirty-seven of the girls are from Calgary and the remainder from other Alberta towns. They are accompanied by Miss Evelyn Storey, camp director, and Mrs. Macbushan, camp mother.

Two years ago but fourteen girls, all of whom were from Calgary, were registered for the camp. Last year there were twenty-two, including five from Medicine Hat. This year there are sixty-seven. The total number of those in camp this year, including all officers and directors, will be seventy-five. Miss Betty Steen, camp naturalist, and Miss Z. Wharby, business manager, came through Monday to make preliminary arrangements. Miss Christine Hunter, sports officer, who has been attending a conference of camp leaders, will join them.

Old Windmills of the Quebec Roadside

By courtesy of the C.P.R. Old Grist Mill, near Varennes, Province of Quebec.

Landmarks of the Quebec road-side, everywhere hold one with fascinated interest on account of their connection with the past, and because as a rule they are such as occur nowhere else this side the Atlantic. Shrines, large and small, elaborate and simple, erected by communities, or by some Society or private person. Large "crosses" marking off the miles and cross-roads; and along these roads, at somewhat frequent intervals, one happens on old mills driven by water-power, or possessed of wind-driven sails, or standing like storm-swept ships at sea, when gales have licked away their canvas. The "gales of time" have in many instances made mere "playthings" out of these old mills erected in olden days of the grand seigneur.

An especially well-preserved old mill of the "towered windmill" type is to be seen on the Varennes road. It arises on the level meadow-lands of the south shore of the St. Lawrence, and naturally as its forbears arise on the landscape back in old Normandy. There is an air about this old tower built so solidly of rude field-stones as to make you think it at one time a tower of defence, as it might easily have been against the plundering savages who no doubt frequently came this way when the tower was built. Sometimes I think we do not realize the value which such old buildings and bits of architecture from another age mean to us as an illuminated page of the country's history. This mill is more surely than as "a landmark" of interest only, to voyagers on the Varennes road. Out of it our present-day architects might very well find many a suggestion for producing a distinct and all-Canadian type of architecture. We have grown too much in the habit of thinking these old mills belong only to the past and that their day is entirely over, except as historic wayside landmarks. Our landscape gardeners in particular might very well take hints from the old mills, and in "effect" from their old lines! "Irrigation works" might even find suggestions from these old Normandy French mills and granaries, for "pumping stations." A stronger appeal to the public would be made were real beauty added to usefulness. One sometimes hears complaints that artesian well "pumps" take from the beauty of the landscape, and so, directly, from the value of property, otherwise in the happy possession of charming views.

"The Round Tower" of the olden days, such as this one at Varennes, appears full of suggestion for all sorts of uses, but of course the original use as "mill," where the countryside brought its grain to be ground into flour, has in most instances passed away, even in Quebec; while the old mills driven by water-power are, in many instances, still in constant use after centuries of faithful service.

Certainly none of these old towers should be allowed to fall into decay or be torn down for any purpose whatsoever. These first guideposts in the history of the country's milling, even now are as priceless old manuscripts, in our library of accomplishment—V. H.

This is a 20% per cent. reduction, and as we represent the United Grain Growers Security Co., we respectfully suggest that the farmers insure in their own company. We sell all classes of insurance. ## THE SKIPPER OF THE J. F.

Tad Weldon was chopping wood at the kitchen door of a little farmhouse on the shore of Lake Champlain. Although the thermometer showed six degrees below zero, Tad, who was as rugged as his own Vermont hills, had taken off his coat. As he drove the axe into the stubborn logs he talked to himself in a queer, jerky fashion.

"Mighty slow way to cut wood! Now if I had that portable sawmill that's advertised 'round here for four hundred dollars—I could clean up our wood lot in the time—it takes me to chop enough for our own use."

He paused at the end of a powerful stroke and, taking off his fur cap, wiped his streaming forehead. "I know I could make a go of it," he continued. "We've got twenty acres of fine oak and beech. Father used to say that it would cut pretty close to a hundred cords to the acre. With coal at four or five dollars a ton, there'd be a lot of folks looking for good hard wood in store and furnace lengths. Phil and I could cut a lot of it between now and spring; then during the summer we could work it up into fireplace and furnace size and next fall hire a barge and take half a dozen loads up to Whitehall and through the canal to Albany."

A sharp gust of stinging cold wind reminded him that it was no time to stand idly dreaming, and he turned again to his work. "I can't see where that four hundred dollars is coming from," he said to himself, "but just the same I'll bet I can get another couple of hundred ahead!"

"Tad!" called Mrs. Weldon from the kitchen. "I guess you'll have to go to town and do a little trading. Haven't a bit of flour in the house, and I used the last of the molasses yesterday. We need some sugar, too, if you can get it, and I should like a pound of that good tea, such as you got me last time. I believe we are going to have a change of weather—the almanac says it's due about now—and I'd hate to have a big storm come on while we're short of provisions."

Tad struck his axe into a log. "All right, mother, I'll take the J. F. There's a good breeze, and I can run up and back in one quarter the time it would take old Nell to go half way by road."

The J. F. was Tad's ice boat which he had built and christened Jack Frost. He may well be pardoned if he was more than willing to lay aside his axe for the fun of a twenty-mile spin over the ice in the speedy craft.

"Oh, I wish there were some other way for you to go than that ice boat," exclaimed Mrs. Weldon. "I'm always worried for fear you'll get in to one of those awful cracks!"

"No fear of that," laughed Tad as he wriggled into his fur coat and pulled his warm cap down over his ears. "There's only one big crack on the lake right now, and it's about five miles out. I shan't have to go within a mile of it."

Like other large bodies of water, Lake Champlain seldom freezes smooth or remains smooth for any length of time. Although the ice may be several feet thick, it frequently opens in long cracks that widen rapidly and close quickly with a force that tilts the ice at a sharp angle. When that has happened a few times there are long stretches of rough broken ice bordering the cracks. Frequently the ice on one side of a wide crack will be forced several feet above the ice on the other side.

There were few skippers on the lake who were a match for Tad Weldon in cleverness and in daring, and although several boats were faster than the Jack Frost, Tad had won the open championship race that year, largely because he was ready to take any reasonable risk.

"I promise to be back by one o'clock at the latest, so you needn't worry," called Tad.

It took him only a few minutes to hoist his sails and get under way, and with a wave of his hand to his mother, he was off. Once clear of the point the Jack Frost caught the stiff breeze sweeping across the lake and the Adirondack Mountains leaped forward.

"Fourteen minutes," remarked Tad as he glanced at his watch, after bringing the boat up into the wind inside the breakwater in front of the city wharves. "Not bad for ten miles, but she'll do better sailing a little closer to the wind."

It took Tad longer to do his man kitting than he had expected, for the town clock struck twelve before he had made his last purchase. As he hurried along he noticed a knot of people gathered round the bulletin board in front of the office of the news and learned what they found so interesting. He had no time, however, and hurried on.

On reaching the boat, his first care was to stow his packages where they would not be jolted off in case he had a rough ride. Setting the jug of molasses in a snug corner at the stern, he tied the handle to the framework. He had hoisted the mainsail and was preparing to run up the jib when the sound of footsteps caused him to glance over his shoulder. A tall, powerfully built man was approaching; and Tad caught sight of a second man emerging from behind the crowd, beneath one of the wharves. The big man carried a suitcase, which he handled as if it were heavy. Stepping close to Tad, he said in a low voice: "My friend and I want to get across to Plattsburg. We're in a hurry. Will you take us over?"

There was nothing unusual in the request; people frequently employ the fast ice boats to get from place to place on Lake Champlain. Tad had picked up many a dollar in that way. He would have liked nothing better than to undertake the trip, but he remembered that he had promised to be at home by one o'clock, and he could not hope to do so if he made the run into Plattsburg.

"I don't believe I can do it, mister," he said. "Sorry, but I've got to get this stuff home. More than all that, you're not dressed for a trip across the lake; you'd freeze."

"We'll risk that," said the big man. "Yes, don't let that worry you," added the second stranger who had come up. "There's ten dollars in it for you if you get us across in quick time."

Tad shook his head. "I'd like to earn ten dollars, but I promised my mother I'd be back by one o'clock, and it's nearly that now. She worries over the chickens if I happen to be late."

"Look here, son," growled the big man, "we haven't any time to fool with you. If you won't go for ten dollars, maybe this will persuade you. And he drew an automatic pistol from the pocket of his overcoat. For an instant Tad was too astonished and frightened to move. "How much?" he stammered.

"Keep your mouth shut and do as you're told!" snarled the big man. "Cast hold of the rope, saggen. Then as the jib fluttered up he ordered Tad to take the tiller and head the boat for the New York shore. As the Jack Frost rounded the end of the breakwater it met a wind that cut like a knife and that caused the two men to flatten out on the floor. The big man held fast to the heavy suitcase with one hand and grasped the tiller with the other.

"Drive her, boy!" he shouted. "And don't try any tricks with us!" Tad "drove her," and the thrill of the bulletlike speed set his blood tingling in his veins. Gradually he lost his fear for the man in front of him, and growing anger burned in his heart. Who were these ruffians, anyway? Why were they holding him up in this way? He ground his teeth. No tricks? Well, while that pistol pointed at his head he was not much to be feared, but if they gave him half a chance he would show them something!

Once out upon the broad lake, the Jack Frost tore along at the rate of a mile a minute. The rumbling cold of the cutting wind was more than Dagan, the smaller man, could bear. Instead of keeping a lookout ahead he pulled his cap over his face and clung blindly to the framework of the boat. The other man did not alter his position, but crouching on the floor with his face toward the stern, kept a watchful eye upon the steersman.

They were running almost parallel to the big crack with its border of rough ice. Little by little Tad edged toward it until his quick eye caught sight of a possible jumping place. A great cake of ice on the near side of the crack lay tilted at an angle that seemed to offer a good take-off for the jump. How wide the crack was at that point or what kind of ice lay beyond it Tad did not know. Setting his teeth, he swung the boat sharply to port and at terrific speed headed for the crack.

Observing the sudden change in direction, the big man glanced over his shoulder to see the reason for it. Before he could regain his position the Jack Frost struck the rough ice with such crash that sounded as if it would smash her to kindling wood. Splinters of ice flew past him. For a moment the boat flew through space and then landed with a frightful jolt. The next moment it was again skimming on its way over smooth ice.

Dagan, who was clinging to the foot of the mast, dragged himself to his knees and, pulling the cap from his face, glanced round him in a dazed manner.

"What the blazes!" he began; then caught his breath sharply. "Where's Jim?" he shouted.

"You mean your friend, he got off when we jumped the crack back there," Tad shouted in reply.

"And the suitcase?" "Took it with him, I reckon. I don't see it anywhere."

"Turn this devil boat round and go back for that suitcase!" roared the man. "Half of that suitcase belongs to me."

"All right," answered Tad. "Back we go!" Swinging round in a wide half circle, he headed again toward the crack.

"I can't see anything of the grip or of Jim," growled Dagan. "Where are you heading for anyhow?"

"Got to find a place where we can jump the crack again," Tad shouted in reply. "We're going about two miles from where we crossed before, but there's a good chance just ahead. Better be down and hang on. Here we go!"

It was not so rough a crossing as the first had been. But it was no less dangerous, and Tad hoped that his passenger would keep his head down as he had done before.

"If he'll give me six minutes, I can do it," he thought.

One, two, three minutes passed; then Dagan raised his head and stared in front of him.

"Hey, you!" he shouted. "We're headed straight back to where we started from! Turn round and steer for Plattsburg. That suitcase ain't way over here!"

Tad made no reply, but held the Jack Frost steadily on her course for the city wharves four miles away.

With a savage oath the man drew a knife from his hip pocket and began gnawing toward the stern. "Turn round, I tell you!" he stormed. For an instant it seemed to Tad that he must obey or else feel the blade between his ribs; then his eye fell on the molasses jug still fixed firmly in place beside him. With a quick jerk he pulled the bowrope loose and swung the jug over his head.

"Stay where you are," he yelled, "or I'll let you have it!"

Dan hoisted. They were scarcely half a mile apart; the boy could hardly miss him at that distance. The man had no desire to be knocked off while the craft was travelling at the rate of

RHEUMATISM FOR OVER 16 YEARS

No Return of The Trouble
Since Taking "Fruit-a-lives"

103 CHURCH ST., MONTREAL.
"I was a great sufferer from Rheumatism for over 16 years. I consulted specialists; took medicine; used lotions; but nothing did me good. Then I began to use 'Fruit-a-lives', and in 15 days the pain was easier and the Rheumatism much better. Gradually, 'Fruit-a-lives' overcame my Rheumatism; and now, for five years, I have had no return of the trouble. I cordially recommend this fruit medicine to all sufferers."

At the time the Jack Frost was on top speed, he expected that the man would pursue him and was determined to defend himself with whatever necessary; but Dagan had lost all desire for a fight. Half frozen and aching in every muscle, he dragged himself ashore and was seeking shelter among the lumber piles when a policeman suddenly seized him. At the same time two other policemen halted him and demanded that he give an account of himself.

"Where are they now?" he asked, and tried to make me take 'em to Plattsburg," began the boy.

"Where are they now?" replied Tad, pointing to Dagan. "The other is out on the lake somewhere—at least, I left 'em there ten minutes ago. He's a big man, and he was going to shoot me if I didn't take him over to Plattsburg."

"That's the man we're looking for!" exclaimed one of the officers. The Collerville savings bank was robbed last night. Come on, boy. We need your help!"

As they hurried back to the boat the officer explained that the thieves had stolen five thousand dollars in bank notes and about the same amount in Liberty bonds.

"The news came in about noon," he said. "We had a description of the men and kept a close watch for 'em, but they were too quick for us. There's a thousand dollars worth of their arrest and the return of the money."

It was an easy matter for Tad to find the place where he had jumped the Jack Frost across the big crack. As they approached the spot they noticed that the ice was broken open, and a quantity of gold coins and several packages of bonds were scattered round. Drawing their revolvers, the policemen picked their way cautiously through the rough ice, but they had little to fear from the once desperate bank robber. They found him crouched among the tilted ice cakes, trying to get out of himself from the biting wind. One arm hung useless at his side, and from a jagged cut on his arm blood trickled in a freezing stream down his face.

"All in," he muttered thickly. "Worldly goods don't count for much. Is. First one ever put anything over on Jim Bailey, and I had the drop on him all the while. He's some kid!"

"That seemed to be the opinion of everyone. Later the bank officials announced that four hundred dollars of the reward would be divided among the officers who had made the arrests, and that the remaining six hundred dollars would be left to Thaddeus Weldon, skipper of the Jack Frost.

ZEPPELINS FOR NEW YORK AND PARIS

The dream of travelling from Paris to New York by air may be realized before the end of 1922 by the use of Zeppelins, on which the French Government has obtained a patent. The first commercial agency arrived in Paris was the Northern. It has been rechristened the Dixmude. This airship will be used first to inaugurate an air line from Marseilles to Algiers in August, carrying on each trip 30 passengers and 5,000 pounds of baggage. The price will be the same as for first-class saloon passage by ship. If this line proves a success the French Government will take steps to develop a world-wide Zeppelin passenger service, including Algiers to Morocco and Senegal, Paris to New York, Paris to Rio de Janeiro. Rigid Zeppelins will be used with gas capacity of 150,000 to 275,000 cubic feet.
